This week, the Russo - Finnish negotiations which have been in progress for over two months came to a head. Russia got tired o 200 HIGH SCHOOL waiting and started a war

It all happened very quickly. Monday and Tuesday Russian newspapers carried vivid stories of border clashes between Finnish and Soviet troops, of screaming artillery fire which had been directed at their territory, and of outrageous insuits which had been huried at peaceful citizens by the Finns. But strangely enough, the Finns had beard nothing of all this uproar. The only frontier activity they knew anything about was that of Russian troops practicing rlfle-marksmanshlp and hand grenade throwing. Still the friction between the two nations grew, until Wed- tion, held under the auspices of the nesday the government of Finland University journalism department, announced that it had withdrawn convenes Friday morning it is ex-Its troops from their ticklish posipected to attract more than 200 high tions on the border and was ready school students from throughout to arbitrate any misunderstanding, the state for the two-day meeting It was too iate, though, said the Soviet foreign minister Moiotoff, Russia's patience had been tried Plummer, head of the department a bit too far. Seeing The Faculty Through Our Eyes

Several facility members and some students have enticized the recent issue of the Wildeat in which certain members of the University facnliv were "graded". One of the most frequent arguments against the article in question was that fellow instructors are much alder critics than sindents.

Although the criticisms contained in the magazine may not have been completely valid. it is The Kerner's belief that they were infinitely more penetrating than ones which might have come from other faculty members. Certainly, they were of greater value to students.

A fellow instructor may know much about a professor's habits, likes, dislikes, and knowledge of a subject. But the student who sits in the professor's class day after day is apr to know more about the man's delivery or presentation. of the subject. Too, the student can gain a comparatively ambentic picture of the instructor's knowledge of his subject from the method of

It is a moor question as to whether the criticisms in this case were written primarily for the sake at criticising someone or for the sake of enlightenment. If the former embraces the jumpose, then the practice is to be deplored. H. on the other hand, the articles were written to offer constructive criticism, they should be continued and given more careful treatment.

It is true that student criticisms must be can stantly edited for personal bias caused by a had grade or some remark. It is also true that criticisms are liable to be written by a student having had only one or two courses in a certain department. Consequently, when a professor in a certain department is selected, the criticizing writer should be one who has concentrated in that department or at least has taken many of the available courses.

Naturally, there will be adverse criticisms. But the better type instructors will welcome the aid, and those who disapprove of the practice will probably benefit in spite of their antagonism. Some will say that it is not the place of the student to criticize his teacher, but if an instructor somehow is failing to impart adequate knowledge of his subject to the student, then who, more easily than the student, can inform him

To be blunt as a hammer, Kentucky fumbled Tennessee to a 19-0 win in the 34th renewal of the Thanksgiving day

Kentucky did more travelling between the 20 yard lines than a suburban commuter but eight costly fumbles sapped Pa., was the original irresistible of a crowd of 10,000, the cream of the sting from the Wildcat knockout punch.

The crowd of 21,000 highly partisan customers who filled every available seat, bleacher and camp stool at Stoll field, saw Kentucky fighting with the courage of a cornered bear, roll up a 15-8 advantage in first downs and twice drive

Vols and Rose Bowl

The Vols came to town with weil stocked scrap books and superlatives drlpping from heimets to cletes. They had been compared, and not unfavorably, to A. Lincoln, the first printing press, G. Washington, the Monroe Doctrine, and Man 'O War. The Voi line was fast, mighty fast. They were sure, mighty sure. And there was one h l of a lot of 'em, but this correspondent can hardiy see how Tennessee — if they were showing their best against Kentucky and there's no reason to suspect they weren't - can hope to hold up Dixle's splendid Rose Bowl tradition

Sure, the Vols hit a littic harder, were a little meaner, and were more hungry for victory than any other team met by Kentucky this season, but the Cats' 101 yards by rushing, 149 yards on passes and 15 first downs don't exactly scream of Tennessee's might. As yet the Voi Games and refreshments are goal has not been mussed but it was only through Fate's broadest smile that Tennessee heid the Cats from one, or even two ,touchdowns. At least that's an opinion as voiced by Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern coach, a press-oox nelghbor, who also termed Ailen as good a passer jointly by the Southern Economic as Davey O'Brlen.

Pass Defense Weak
